Eaglin pledges support for teaching

Challenging them to confront self-destructive student behavior, MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin shared his expectations with faculty and staff members at the traditional opening of school convocation.

"We have a responsibility to say to students that this is right and this is wrong. Let's confront self-destructive behavior and not be ashamed of doing so," he said.

Suggesting there should be a new grade of NY (Not Yet), the president said that if there are Not Yets with us "the most caring thing we can do for them, after working with them and trying our best, is to say 'Go home and come back when you are ready.'"

According to Dr. Eaglin, the vast majority of MSU students want to be successful, are mature, do care and will be good. "We can't let five percent ruin things for the rest and themselves," he said.

In his first major address to MSU employees since assuming the presidency on July 1, Dr. Eaglin also challenged the faculty to bring all their professionalism into the classroom.

He told the faculty that he expected them to be prepared, on time and ready. "If you are not then, as far as I am concerned, you are not a professional," Dr. Eaglin said.

The president pledged that he would constantly strive to provide the dollars, the opportunity and the wherewithal for faculty members to succeed in their profession.

"I want to make sure that this whole institution revolves around you wonderful people who take the responsibility for the young people who've come here wanting to succeed and wanting to learn. I want to make sure that we organize in such a way that we are reinforcing what happens in that classroom," he said.

Dr. Eaglin set the stage for his remarks by citing the accomplishments of the University's last five presidents and saying that these individuals had provided him with the opportunity to take the institution into the next millennium. Past presidents on hand for the convocation included Dr. Adron Doran (1954-77), Dr. Morris Norfleet (1977-84), and Dr. A. D. Albright (1986-87).

Unable to attend were Dr. Herb. F. Reinhard and (1984-86) and Dr. C. Nelson Grote (1987-1992).

After traveling the region and talking with civic leaders, politicians, educators and other friends of MSU, Dr. Eaglin said that he had found that the perception of MSU was "solid and sound. You are a healthy institution and you should be proud of what you have accomplished in this section of Kentucky and the role you have played."

Warning that the University couldn't rest on its laurels, Dr. Eaglin said that there were great expectations of MSU out in the region. "In many ways, this institution is a reflection of the mountain people. We are them and they want the quality of their life to change in a positive way. They want us to be part of that process," he said.

He told his listeners that the question was how he as president, with their help, could accomplish this change. "What we must live up to is a true understanding of what we are—a state regional Mayor Jerry Abramson visited the Louisville alumni reception for Dr. and Mrs. Eaglin to appoint President Eaglin an honorary jockey in the Kentucky Derby. The mayor said MSU's more than 1,200 alumni in the Greater Louisville area are valuable members of the community.

BOR approves feasibility study, hears reports

With state funding for higher education declining, the MSU Foundation has approved a capital campaign feasibility study, the MSU Board of Regents were told at its meeting on Sept. 18.

The decision by the Foundation's Board of Trustees follows earlier statements by MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin that the University needed to seek alternate funding sources rather than rely almost totally on state revenue sources.

According to Keith Kappes, MSU vice president for university advancement, there were four factors influencing the Foundation's decision: an obvious need for sustained financial support through endowment; 10 straight years of growth in annual giving; a donor base of almost 4,000 individuals and corporations, and Dr. Eaglin's enthusiastic support and fund raising track record.

Private giving to the University in fiscal year 1991-92 was up 28 percent over the previous year with gifts totaling $1,297,197 this year as compared with $1,012,918 last year, Kappes reported to the regents.

Dr. Eaglin told the board that the feasibility study will tell MSU if it is ready for a capital campaign and, through an independent third party, would check the health of the University in terms of perceptions.

The president cautioned that for a successful capital campaign it would not be enough for people to like MSU, but they needed also to be willing to give money. The feasibility study is only a first step, he reminded the regents.

Earlier in the meeting, the board adopted a resolution commending former regents William E. Cofield of Frankfort, T. T. Colley of Pikeville, Wayne M. Martin of Winchester and Charles D.

NEW REGENTS SWORN IN

Baker of Whitesburg; John M. Rosenberg of Prestonsburg; L.M. "Sonny" Jones of Frankfort and James A. Finch of Maysville. Following the swearing in ceremonies, Seaton was elected as board chairman and Baker as vice chair. Remaining as board secretary and treasurer are Carol Johnson and Porter Dailey, respectively.

Enrollment, freshman quality up

MSU's enrollment has reached new heights, but officials are more excited about the quality of the University's first-time freshman students.

Preliminary headcount figures for fall, released by MSU's Office of the Registrar, show 9,031 students enrolled, a 2.5 percent increase over last fall's student population of 8,812.

Enrollment increases at the school have been constant since 1986, but early indications are that this year's entering freshman class may be one of the best prepared in recent history.

"We are seeing a higher average Admissions Index score for new freshmen than in past years," President Ronald G. Eaglin said. "Based on data collected earlier this month, the Admissions Index is up nearly 15 points over the 1991 average. This speaks well for the preparation for college these students received in their local school systems."

The Admissions Index, used to determine a student's eligibility for admission to MSU, is figured by multiplying the score from an appropriate standardized college admissions test by 10 and grade point average by 100 and then adding the results. MSU began using the Admissions Index to determine eligibility in 1986.

The 1992 first-time freshman class has an average Admissions Index of 487.96 as compared with 473.44 for the 1991 class.

Anticipating a possible enrollment decline, MSU used what officials termed a "conservative" enrollment projection of 8,400 students in preparing its 1992-93 budget.

To speculate why enrollment went up would just be a "guessing game at this time," said Dr. John C. Philley, MSU's executive vice president for academic affairs. "However, we maintained all along that if there were to be growth it would be at our off-campus sites and early indications are showing that this may be the case."

Class enrollments at all of MSU's regional class sites are up nearly 16 percent, while headcount enrollment at the three extended campus centers and the Appalachian Graduate Consortium increased by more than 25 percent.

NEW PRESIDENTS

MSU President Ronald G. Eaglin, left, congratulated Alumni Association President Louis M. "Sonny" Jones following swearing in ceremonies held recently. Jones will serve a two-year term on a volunteer basis as head of the University's more than 30,000 alumni. Dr. Eaglin, who became MSU's 12th president on July 1, gave the oath of office to Jones.

Albin new Information Sciences chair

Dr. Marvin Albin has been named chair of the Department of Information Sciences at MSU.

Announcement of his appointment, which was effective July 1, was made by Dr. Bernard Davis, dean of the College of Business. Dr. Albin, who served as interim chair during 1991-92, succeeds Dr. Sue Luckey, who returned to full-time teaching.

An associate professor, Dr. Albin came to MSU in 1990 from South-Western Publishing Company in Cincinnati, Ohio, where he was CIS editor for the College Division.

Dr. Albin, a former assistant dean of the College of Business Administration and faculty member at Western Kentucky University, also taught at Murray State University. A former examiner with the Kentucky Department of Banking and Securities, Dr. Albin has also served as a consultant to several publishing firms and other businesses.

Earning his Doctor of Education degree from Arizona State University, he has completed additional postgraduate work at James Madison University and Central State University as well as an AACSB Advanced MIS Faculty Institute at Indiana University. He holds a bachelor's degree from Murray State University and a master's degree from the University of Kentucky.

Active in the Data Processing Management Association, he has served on its Curriculum Steering Committee, the Special Interest Group for Education and the board of directors. He also is a member of the Association for Computer Educators, the Institute for Management Science and the Morehead Rotary Club of which he serves as secretary.

Weikel, Mosley named department chairs

Two departments in MSU's College of Education and Behavioral Sciences are under new leadership this fall.

Dr. William J. Weikel, a member of MSU's education faculty since 1975, has been named chair of the Department of Leadership and Secondary Education.

Appointed as the chair of the Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education was Dr. William J. Mosley, a former administrator/educator at Western Illinois University.

Formerly the director of WIU's Center for the Preparation of Educators of Minority Children, Dr. Mosley has an extensive background in special education programs, including the handicapped, as well as in minority education. In the MSU post, he succeeds Dr. Paul McGhee, who announced last year his intention to return full-time to the classroom.

A former chair of WIU's Department of Special Education, Dr. Mosley was a Board of Governors Administrative Fellow in 1989-90, assigned to the Office of Provost and Vice President for Academic Affairs at Eastern Illinois University. He has served on several college faculties, including Louisiana State University, Indiana University, the University of Texas and the University of Hartford.

A former teacher in the public schools of Indiana and Tennessee, Dr. Mosley earned his doctorate in special education from the University of Connecticut, a master's degree from the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh, and the bachelor's degree from Fisk University.

Dr. Weikel, recognized nationwide as a leading authority on clinical mental health counseling, succeeds Dr. Richard Daniel, professor of education, who served as interim chair during the past year.

A charter member of the American Mental Health Counselors Association (AMHCA) and the founding editor of its journal, Dr. Weikel also is past president of the association and served on the Governing Council of the 57,000 member American Association for Counseling and Development. He has held national and state offices in numerous other professional organizations.

Dr. Weikel earned his B.A. degree from Temple University, an M.A. degree from the University of Scranton and doctorate from the University of Florida.

RENOVATED, REOPENED AND RENAMED

Mays Hall Apartments, a newly renovated facility featuring contemporary living apartments with private baths and kitchenettes, opened at the beginning of the fall term. The one, two and three room units are designed for students who need 10- or 12-month accommodations. A former residence hall for male students, the building was opened in 1937 as Mens Hall. Its name was changed to Mays Hall in 1968. To better identify the new type of living quarters, "apartments" was added to its name. A formal ribbon cutting and open house will take place as part of Homecoming '92 activities on Saturday, Oct. 17

Education clearinghouse established

Sharing of expertise and information is the primary objective of MSU's Clearinghouse for School Services, a new arm of the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences.

The clearinghouse was established to keep up with and coordinate the outreach efforts to MSU faculty members, to help determine the needs of the region's public schools and to aid in meeting those needs.

The clearinghouse will do much to assist MSU in meeting the challenges of the Kentucky Education Reform Act, according to its director Dr. Marium Williams, a veteran public school administrator and teacher who joined MSU's faculty in 1990.

"It's really just in its developmental stages right now," said Dr. Williams, a former Nicholas County Elementary School assistant principal who assumed the directorship Aug. 1.

One major role for the clearinghouse and its director will be planning inservice workshops for public school teachers and for MSU faculty members with guest speakers who have expertise in special areas related to KERA.

"My hope is that the public school systems will see us as providers of inservice programs," said

Dr. Williams, who has some definite ideas about inservice.

"Inservice should not be a single shot item. There must be more than a one-time presentation. We need to follow up and continue sharing information. We need to provide the public school personnel—teachers and administrators—with knowledge, encouragement and feedback," she said.

The need for quality inservice programs has more than doubled now with the legislature giving schools the opportunity to use up to five instructional days for additional inservice programs. Previously four days were set aside for inservice.

"Since most inservice programs for this year are already scheduled, we have the luxury of time to determine from the school systems what particular needs are out there and properly prepare to address those needs," Dr. Williams said.

One topic to be addressed, based on a survey of professional coordinators from 17 school districts, deals with implementation of the KERA initiative outcome-based education.

Sharing new information among the college's faculty members and with the various school systems is another critical element, according to Dr. Williams. She said that she expects the clearinghouse also to be a catalyst for keeping MSU faculty aware of programs on innovative teaching methods aired regularly over KET's Star Channel and especially those dealing with KERA initiatives.

Serving as a liaison between the University and the Kentucky Educational Development Corporation's staff development officer and the state Department of Education's Regional Service Center housed on MSU's campus is another responsibility for Dr. Williams. Those collaborative efforts also will extend to other state universities under a Council on Higher Education liaison group.

"By working cooperatively with other education agencies, we will be more effective in obtaining additional grant monies for special support conferences," she said.

For the most part, Dr. Williams sees MSU's Clearinghouse for School Services as a means of maintaining close contacts with school districts, their superintendents and professional coordinators in order to stay alert to their needs and to provide them the necessary expertise.

Schools may contact Dr. Williams by calling her MSU office at (606) 783-2503.

A GATHERING OF PRESIDENTS

Three of MSU's former presidents were on hand as well as the current president, Dr. Ronald G. Eaglin, for the recent traditional opening of school convocation for faculty and staff. Taking time prior to the session to share their historical perspectives with Dr. Eaglin, at left, were Dr. Morris L. Norfleet (1977-84), Dr. A. D. Albright (1986-87) and Dr. Adron Doran (1954-1977). Invited back, but unable to return at this time, were Dr. C. Nelson Grote (1987-92) and Dr. Herb. F. Reinhard (1984-86). During his address to the faculty and staff, Dr. Eaglin stressed that he won't tolerate self-destructive students or unprepared professors. He also pledged to provide the resources faculty members need to do their job.

Mitchelson department chair

Dr. Ronald L. Mitchelson, previously a professor of geography at the University of Georgia, has been named chair of MSU's Department of Geography, Government and History.

The appointment was announced by Dr. Gerald DeMoss, acting dean of MSU's College of Arts and Sciences. The new chair also will hold faculty rank as professor of geography.

"Dr. Mitchelson has experience in teaching and has done extensive research work," Dr. DeMoss said. "During his 13 years at UG he served and chaired numerous committees on both the departmental and college level. His broad-based background will be an asset as he leads our multidisciplinary department,"

Dr. DeMoss added.

The new department chair, who considers himself a social scientist, earned his doctorate and master's degree from the Ohio State University and bachelor's degree magna cum laude from State University of New York at Buffalo.

A member of Phi Beta Kappa, he is active in the Association of American Geographers and its special interest groups on transportation, energy and behavioral methods as well as the National Council for Geographic Education.

Dr. Mitchelson has received numerous research grants, including more than $63,000 from the U.S. Department of State for a project tracing the "Georges Bank Historic Fisheries: 1871-1920" and several from the U.S. Department of Commerce to investigate trends in long distance commuting from basically rural to urban areas and the development consequences for rural areas.

He has authored or co-authored more than 30 articles for various publications and 28 abstracts as well as other published materials. He also serves as a referee for several professional journals and as a textbook reviewer for various major publishing firms.

Lewis WMKY news director

Tom Lewis has joined the staff of WMKY-FM 90.3, public radio from MSU, as news and public affairs director.

"Making WMKY the No. 1 radio news source in MSU's service region," is the goal Lewis has set for himself. "I believe my department has an obligation to offer our listeners a thorough, in-depth news cast," he said.

A native of London, Lewis began working at the radio station while a student at MSU. He was a member of the Eagle Sports Network for three years and most recently served as a program host and sports assistant.

A two-time graduate of MSU, Lewis earned a bachelor's degree in journalism in 1989 and received a master's degree in communications in 1991.

Scholarship auction scheduled for Feb. 5, sale items needed

A charity auction will be held Friday, Feb. 5, in the Crager Room of the Adron Doran University Center and alumni and other friends of the University are urged to help out. Not as bidders, although that is welcome, but as donors of items to be auctioned.

The goal of the program is to raise enough money to push the Don Holloway Memorial Fund to the $10,000 level needed to create an endowed scholarship yearly in Holloway's memory.

A former MSU professor of speech, theatre and radio/television, Holloway was also a graduate of the University, serving as president of the Alumni Association during the 1959-60 school year.

Items that are needed include original works of art, prints, pottery and/or antiques. All items should be sent to Harlan Hamm, Breckinridge Hall, MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.

Persons wishing to make cash contributions to the project should mail them to the Don Holloway Memorial Endowment, MSU Foundation, Inc., Palmer Development House, Morehead, KY 40351.

Any contribution, either cash or personal property, will be tax deductible as provided for by law.

ALASKAN ALUMNUS

President-emeritus C. Nelson Grote found that MSU alumni can truly be found from coast to coast as he met alumnus Stu Felberg on a recent post-retirement cruise in Anchorage, Alaska. A former student of Dr. Grote's in the mid-60s, Felberg has been employed by the Alaska Department of Fish and Wildlife as an enforcement officer for more than 20 years. Originally from the Bronx, N.Y., Felberg owns a farm in southern Kentucky and remains loyal to his alma mater.

MSU alumni located from coast to coast

Whether you travel to California or Maine, Alaska or Florida or any state in between, there's a chance you will run into an MSU alumnus.

MSU has alumni living in every state of the union, according to Bill Redwine, MSU's director of alumni relations. Of MSU's more than 32,000 alumni, there are 28,116 who are living in one of the 50 states, the District of Columbia or U.S. territories, Redwine's computerized records show.

More than half of the alumni tracked by Redwine and his staff live in Kentucky (18,528) and the majority of those living out of state tend to make their home east of the Mississippi River.

Ohio is the next most populated state with MSU alumni with 4,170 calling it home, but 836 alums have chosen the warmer climate of Florida. After the Sunshine State, Indiana seems to be the preferred abode with 510 alumni, followed by Virginia with 361 and New York with 312.

Of the 50 states, Vermont is the least desired habitat with only one MSU alumnus there. Crossing the Mississippi, Texas and California are the leaders with 255 and 205 MSU alumni respectively.

Alaska lays claim to 13 former MSU students, while Hawaii boasts 17. Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands each have one alumnus.

Two-thirds of alumni calling Kentucky home are residents of the University's 22-county service area. Rowan County leads with 1,724 alumni, followed by Carter (1,065), Greenup (995) and Pike (858).

The MSU alumni population for other counties in MSU's service region follows:

Boyd, 795; Floyd, 778; Montgomery, 575; Johnson, 492; Mason, 476; Letcher, 475; Fleming, 469; Bath, 453; Morgan, 444; Lewis, 423; Magoffin, 376; Knott, 342; Lawrence, 317; Breathitt, 307; Martin, 296; Elliott, 203; Menifee, 169; and Wolfe, 160.

"Our alumni represent just about every profession you could name and the majority also are active in their community," Redwine said. "Every day and in every way, through its alumni MSU is fulfilling its mission of serving the region," he said.

MSU gets Title III-Strengthening grant

Students and faculty at MSU both stand to gain from a new federal grant totaling more than $284,000 over a two-year period.

MSU has received notification that its project "Improvement of Academic Programs and Faculty Development" has been funded by the U.S. Department of Education under a Title III-Strengthening Institutions Grant.

The project not only will help "underprepared" incoming students improve their basic writing, thinking and math skills, but also will serve as a faculty development program as it aids them in their classroom preparation, according to Dr. Judy Rogers, dean of undergraduate programs and project director.

In preparing the successful grant proposal, Dr. Rogers was assisted by Dr. Virginia E. Wheelless, director of planning.

The program has four distinct parts: initiating writing across the curriculum; establishing a Writing Center; implementing reasoning across the curriculum, and supplemental instruction in problem solving math.

The project will focus on students with enhanced ACT scores in the 14 to 18 range who have not declared a major. "Our studies show that this group of underprepared students is the most at risk of not being able to succeed in college," Dr. Rogers said. "By strengthening their basic skills, we will be providing them with the tools to succeed."

The program will be a campuswide effort with MSU's Academic Services Center helping with advising, counseling and tracking the students.

Calling the grant project "timely," the dean said that it comes at the same time that MSU's General Education Core is undergoing review. The primary goals coming out of that review deal with basic skills. "This will support those goals," she said.

The grant offers MSU the opportunity to incorporate writing skills across the curriculum with faculty development activities which include not only training but follow-up.

"It means that we will help faculty by showing them how to put writing assignments into their syllabuses," Dr. Rogers said.

MSU also will be able to purchase computer hardware and software necessary to set up a Writing Center where students will receive individual tutoring. Funding also is included for staffing the center with a part-time coordinator, two graduate assistants and peer tutors.

"We are going to be able to train faculty and assist them in employing critical thinking skills in their classroom assignments as well," Dr. Rogers said.

A supplemental instruction program for Math 131, a problem solving math course, will be added to improve basic math skills. "We will train math majors to be tutors in this area. They will sit in on the actual class with the professor and then schedule supplemental class sessions to assist the students," Dr. Rogers said.

"One of the best things about this grant project is that it is self-perpetuating," the dean said. "As our faculty learn strategies to focus on basic skills in their own individual disciplines, the emphasis will become an integral part of their classroom teaching," she added.

Alumni membership cards in the mail

The first batch of membership cards for active members of the MSU Alumni Association are in the mail! After an extensive study in design and application, the Alumni Association has settled upon a new membership card that will enable active members to take full advantage of many of the benefits available.

Those alumni who made gifts to the MSU Foundation in the months of July and August should be receiving their new cards very soon. According to Bill Redwine, director of Alumni Relations, the cards are a necessity because of the discounts that have been negotiated with the Office of Intercollegiate Athletics and the University Bookstore.

Presentation of the membership card at the ticket window of any athletic event will entitle the bearer to a $1 discount off the purchase price of individual tickets while the Bookstore is offering a 10 percent discount on any purchase with the card.

"We have had this project in the planning stages for two years and thanks to the Office of User Service we have developed a computer program that enables us to print the cards directly from the computer system and therefore use only minimal staff time in distributing them," Redwine said.

The growth of the active membership from 975 to nearly 5,000 in the last five years makes this project a very time consuming undertaking without computerization.

In addition to ticket discounts and Bookstore discounts, active members also receive a membership flyer for ALAMO Rent-a-Car which entitles them to a 10 percent discount on car rentals in any city served by ALAMO, discounts on admission to the "Arts in Morehead" series, access to the University swimming pool and weightroom and the ever popular Alumni Grant program for children of alumni.

For more information on becoming an active member of the MSU Alumni Association, please call (606) 783-2080.

Arts in Morehead series schedule set

From Shakespearean comedy to modern dance and chamber music to acoustic blues, the 1992-93 Arts in Morehead (AIM) series will bring a stellar array of performances to the region this year.

(AIM is a cooperative effort between MSU and the Morehead/Rowan County Arts Council.)

Season tickets for the six-event series are available at $30 for an individual, while families—no matter how large—may subscribe for only $50.

"The season is an eclectic mix with programming designed to appeal to a wide range of tastes," said Thom Yancy, MSU assistant professor of radio/television and AIM program chair.

"We are bringing a variety of artists—both established and rising stars—who have excellent reputations and are offering them to the region at a fraction of what you'd pay to see them in Lexington or Cincinnati," Yancy said. "Whether you subscribe to the entire season or attend single events, AIM is a bargain."

The 1992-93 season includes:

Oct. 25, North Carolina Shakespeare Festival's production of "Two Gentlemen from Verona," 8 p.m., Button Auditorium. The North Carolina troupe, a favorite of AIM audiences, returns to present one of the bard's earliest works which is thought to be his first romantic comedy.

Nov. 19, Aequalis, a chamber music trio which specializes in new American music, 8 p.m., Duncan Recital Hall.

Dec. 10, The Louisville Orchestra String Ensemble, musicians from the internationally-known Louisville Orchestra playing chamber music by the world's masters, 8 p.m., Duncan Recital Hall.

Jan. 17, National Opera Company's production of "Die Fledermaus," Strauss's sparkling comic opera of mistaken identities, to be sung in English, 8 p.m., Button Auditorium.

Jan. 26, Silverwood, a flute and guitar duo performing 16th century through 20th century music, 8 p.m., Duncan Recital Hall.

March 1, Nicholas Rodriguez & DanceCompass, a modern dance company known for its diverse repertoire of powerful movement and provocative dance/theatre, 8 p.m., Button Auditorium.

Season tickets are available now from Arts Council members or by writing AIM, P.O. Box 950, Morehead, KY 40351, or by calling the program chair at (606) 783-2602.

Salyer appointed nursing chair

A former faculty member in MSU's Department of Nursing and Allied Health Sciences has returned to head that department.

Dr. Linda K. Salyer has assumed the post of department chair, succeeding Dr. Betty Porter who returned to teaching on a full-time basis, according to Dr. John C. Philley, MSU executive vice president for academic affairs.

Dr. Salyer taught both full-time and part-time in our program from 1973 to 1981," said Dr. Philley. "We are very pleased to welcome her back to the campus."

"Under Dr. Porter's leadership, MSU's nursing and allied health sciences programs have gained the reputation of producing highly skilled and caring care givers," Dr. Philley said. "We are confident that Dr. Salyer will continue to build on those standards."

Dr. Salyer will be responsible for guiding the University's two-year and four-year nursing degree programs, the associate degree programs in radiologic technology and respiratory therapy and continuing education programs for professionals in health care-related fields.

In addition to her bachelor's and master's degrees in nursing, she also earned the Ph.D. degree in educational psychology at the University of Kentucky, where she was a member of the nursing faculty and a former research assistant in U.K.'s College of Medicine.

At U.K., she was the recipient of the College of Nursing's 1990 Innovative Teaching Award. Dr. Salyer also has taught at Eastern Kentucky University and Midway College.

Dr. Salyer not only has clinical experience as a hospital staff nurse, but also as a member of the U.S. Naval Reserve Nurse Corps in which she holds rank as lieutenant commander.

A consultant for Psychosocial Nursing, a national journal, Dr. Salyer has been a consultant for Lexington area hospitals, the Lexington Chapter, American Red Cross, and for continuing education programs statewide.

Friends of Morehead State University

Since our 'retirement' from MSU, Mignon and I have continued our role as University supporters. Some of our happiest and most successful times came while we were with the University as president and first lady from 1954 to 1977.

We continue to be a part of campus activities whenever circumstances permit. We have felt welcome and made a part of a growing and progressive resurgence in Morehead's history.

Mignon and I love the University - for the students, the alumni, faculty and staff have endeared themselves to us, and we to them. We wanted to have a permanent part of the University's future and oncoming students. That is why we formed an endowed scholarship fund with the MSU Foundation some years ago. We have been able to modestly support the fund, but our many wonderful friends have dramatically helped build this fund to its present state of awarding a grant of $1,000 each year.

Sometime ago, we decided that to help good students be able to attend MSU, we would include the University in our wills for a gift to this endowed scholarship fund.

We know that our estate will help the Adron and Mignon Doran Scholarship Fund provide assistance to worthy and needy students in achieving educational goals, and we invite you to join us.

With your help, we can create an endowment that will insure that the mission of Morehead State University is completed.

Very Sincerely,

Adron Doran

Dr. Adron Doran
President Emeritus

Winfield new MTEP coordinator

Ernestine M. Winfield, who joined MSU's faculty last fall, has been named coordinator of the University's Minority Teacher Education Program (MTEP).

Winfield will continue teaching in the Department of Industrial Education and Technology while serving as coordinator, according to Dr. Sylvester Kohut, Jr., dean of the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences.

MTEP, funded in part by the Kentucky Council on Higher Education, is designed to encourage minority students to become teachers.

As coordinator, Winfield will act as liaison with teachers, counselors and administrators at schools in Jefferson and Fayette counties.

With their assistance, she will recruit students for MTEP, conduct workshops in the schools, develop and implement campus programs for the students and coordinate tutorial and counseling activities for MTEP students attending MSU.

Twenty years after graduating from Jeffersonville (Ind.) High School, Winfield enrolled at MSU where she earned an associate degree and then the B.S. degree in welding technology cum laude. She also holds the M.S. degree in vocational education from MSU.

ETHIOPIAN IS VISITING PROFESSOR

Dr. Andargatchew Tesfaye, right, the 1992-93 visiting international scholar at MSU, gets a tour of the campus from Michael Seelig, MSU social work program coordinator. Dr. Andargatchew, a social work educator and administrator from Addis Ababa University in Ethiopia, will be teaching in the Department of Sociology, Social Work and Corrections. He also will be available to speak to other MSU classes and to public schools in the region.

Welch is program manager

Marvin L. Welch, a former teacher with the Bourbon County School System, has been named program manager for MSU's Kentucky Teacher Internship Program.

He began the new position on Aug. 1, according to Dr. Sylvester Kohut, Jr., dean of the College of Education and Behavioral Sciences. "Mr. Welch will be responsible for coordinating all phases of the KTIP program, from the initial training and re-training of professional school personnel to recruiting teacher education faculty," he said.

"He also will coordinate assignments of teacher educators to all intern committees throughout MSU's service region while utilizing his knowledge as an elementary and high school teacher to help the University provide the best possible training," Dr. Kohut added.

Welch holds a Rank I in administration and supervision from MSU. He received a Master of Arts in Education from Georgetown College and a Bachelor of Arts in elementary education from the University of Kentucky.

He also holds certification for Endorsement for Elementary School Principal for Grades K-8, Endorsement for Director of Pupil Personnel and Standard Elementary Certificate for Grades 1-8.

A native of Paris, he is a former teacher at North Middletown Elementary and Bourbon County High Schools. He also served as a KTIP resource teacher and a math specialist for grades K-4.

Niemeyer named certification officer

Dr. Barbara E. Niemeyer, associate professor of education, has been named teacher certification officer for MSU's College of Education and Behavioral Sciences.

Announcement of her appointment was made by Dr. Sylvester Kohut Jr., dean of the college. She assumed her new role Aug. 1.

Dr. Niemeyer, a member of the Department of Elementary, Reading and Special Education faculty since 1983, succeeds Jerry Franklin as certification officer.

An assistant professor in the Department of Leadership and Secondary Education, Franklin had expressed a desire to return to full-time teaching, according to Kohut.

"Mr. Franklin has served the University with distinction during his 22 years as a teacher certification officer," the dean said. "Thousands of students as well as our faculty and staff have benefited from his thorough knowledge of certification regulations and processes. As a relative newcomer to the state, I too have appreciated his expertise in these matters," Dr. Kohut said.

Niemeyer

Dr. Niemeyer came to MSU from Ball State University, where she was an assistant professor of education. During the 1985-86 school year, she served as interim dean of what was then MSU's College of Professional Studies. A former public school special education teacher, Dr. Niemeyer served as director of special education for the Isaac School District in Phoenix, Ariz., and directed a number of special education projects at Arizona State University, where she earned her doctorate in educational administration. She earned her B.A. and M.A. degrees from Fort Hays State University.

While acting on a number of routine fiscal items, the board ratified the sale of revenue bonds for Phase I of the Lappin Hall project. Construction is under way on a nearly 35,000-square-foot addition to MSU's science building. Contractor for the more than $5 million project is Woodford Builders, Inc., of Lexington. The addition will house laboratory functions, animal care facilities and chemical storage facilities. Completion of the addition is targeted for September 1993.

The board also heard reports on enrollment and student housing occupancy. Preliminary figures for fall 1992 show another record enrollment as student headcount reached 9,007. Residence halls have a 92 percent occupancy rate, while family housing units are at 93 percent capacity. Mike Mincey, MSU vice president for student life, told the board that the housing rate was within 2 percent of the budget projection.

New Lady Eagle coach optimistic

First-year coach Janet Gabriel is excited and optimistic, yet anxious, as she begins her tenure as the Head Women's Basketball Coach at MSU.

She knows her squad will benefit from the excitement and enthusiasm that accompanies a new head coach, and she has reason to be optimistic about her team's chances thanks to several key returnees and good first-year recruiting class.

But, the Oklahoma graduate, who came to MSU from Union College, knows there are many questions to be answered and a system to be learned in a very short period of time.

The Lady Eagles lost three letterwinners, multi-year starters Shannon Litton, Julie Magrane and Beth Ousley, from a squad that finished 11-16 last season.

Gabriel considers the 1992-93 Lady Eagles strong at the two most important positions, center and point guard, thanks to the fact that heading the list of five letterwinners returning are center Bev Smith and point guards Sherita Joplin and Stacey Spake.

Smith, a senior, has earned second team All-Ohio Valley Conference honors the past two seasons, averaging 13.7 points and 7.6 rebounds last season, after leading the team in scoring in 1990-91 with a 16.9 point per game average. Joplin averaged 9.4 points and handed out 53 assists as a freshman while Spake, a junior, averaged 6.6 points per game and had a team-high 91 assists last year.

Other returning letterwinners are senior guards Sondi Eden and Brenda English, both of whom saw extensive playing time last season and participated with Athletes in Action teams this summer.

Also returning is sophomore guard Julie Belcher.

Four high school standouts make up the 1992-93 recruiting class. They are Letisha Glover, a guard from Morehead (Rowan County), Megan Hupfer, a forward from Pendleton, Ind. (Pendleton Heights), Brandi Jimison, a forward from Wilkinson, W.Va. (Burch), and Heather Reed, a guard from Haines City, Fla. (Haines City).

'Dick Fick Show' will feature new faces

New faces but not a new style will be the order of the day for Coach Dick Fick's second MSU basketball squad. The Eagles were 14-15 last year in the animated coach's first season.

The 1991-92 Eagles ranked 10th nationally in scoring and also among the leaders in three-point field goals made per game. Forward Brett Roberts became the first MSU player ever to lead the nation in scoring.

Kelly Wells, a former standout at Morehead's Rowan County High School, heads a long list of newcomers on the 1992-93 Eagle basketball roster. At least seven newcomers are expected to be on hand for the coming season.

Three transfers sat out last season while attending MSU. They are Wells, a transfer from Tulsa, and Creighton transfers Johnnie Williams and Todd Geyer.

Four outstanding signees will join the squad. Kentucky all-stars

Bentz

John Brannen (Newport Central Catholic), Marty Cline (University Heights) and J. J. Hylton (Belfrey) are the high school signees. Prep schooler Joel Frakes from Stevensville, Mich., is a strong candidate for a guard spot.

Back from last season will be starters Doug Bentz and Martez

Ballard. Bentz earned second-team All-Ohio Valley Conference honors while leading the Eagles in rebounding.

Of the 11 individuals sure to be on this year's roster, six are Kentuckians.

MSU will miss Roberts, but Fick promises more of the exciting, run-and-gun, shoot-the-three-pointer type of offense and pressure defense this season.

The much improved home schedule includes eight exciting OVC games, along with games against Division I opponents Wright State, Missouri-Kansas City and Western Michigan.

Highlighting the road schedule are games at Michigan State and Kentucky and the Ball State's Cardinal Varsity Club Classic.

university. That has a special meaning to me because it fits exactly with my philosophy as an educator," the president said.

The ingredients of a state regional university, according to Dr. Eaglin, are great teaching, informed scholarship and aggressive public service.

"My job and that of everyone here is for one primary purpose and that is to ensure the people of Kentucky that we will provide, once the door is closed in that classroom, the best we have to offer," Dr. Eaglin said. "Our primary mission is to help students learn, to develop a positive self-concept and know that they can compete with anyone in the world."

The job of those with non-teaching roles is to ensure that the faculty has what it needs to serve the primary mission—the teaching of students.

Calling scholarship important to that mission, Dr. Eaglin committed himself to seeing that the dollars and opportunity were available to faculty for renewal in their discipline.

He also told his audience that it was imperative that MSU share its expertise outside the classroom if Eastern Kentucky is to continue on its path of creating a middle class and better opportunities for its children.

Noting that there are tough economic times still ahead, Dr. Eaglin said that higher education was going to have to justify its existence and change the minds of decision-makers to get its rightful share of the dollars.

"I give you my word that I am doing everything in my power to see that higher education is on the agenda in this state, but it also should be on your agenda because it is what we have dedicated our lives to and it is what we believe in," President Eaglin said.

"What is happening in this state is just a metaphor for the whole country. This University is one of many that must wake up to the reality that things are not going to be the same," he said. "We have to be smarter; we have to be cooperative; we have to be collaborative, and we have to work together—not just those of us in this room, but all of higher education in this state."

Through the program, alumni and other friends of the University are invited to donate to the Camden-Carroll Library their favorite childhood books and to share their favorite recollection about them.

The contributor's name and quotations from his/her recollections will be printed on a nameplate in the book, and the book will be displayed on a special shelf in the Library for easy access by young readers and their families.

Is your favorite childhood book no longer available? Or, do you have too many favorites from which to choose? PDK invites you to select a book that is a favorite of one of the children in your life and donate it to the collection. If your child or grandchild requests it repeatedly, others will probably be as enthusiastic about it as well.

Books may be directly donated to the library, or if you cannot locate a new hardback copy, you may send a twenty-dollar check (per book) and the book will be ordered for you.

For further information, you may call 1-800-262-7474 (in Ky.) or 1-800-354-2090 (adjoining states) and ask for: Helen Williams, Ext. 3-5102 or Dreama Price, Ext. 3-2832.

Books or checks may be sent to Helen Williams; Head, Learning Resource Center; Camden-Carroll Library; MSU, Morehead, KY 40351.
